Designing for the diverse sectors within retail is more than adapting a prototype to a specific site. It's about understanding the client's needs, culture and team dynamics while providing professional services that augment their corporate objectives. It's about having a solid understanding of the code variations throughout the nation, and having effective processes in place to facilitate the fast-pace schedule of multiple openings simultaneously. And most importantly, it's about finding the right, like-minded team willing to be responsive to the client's needs.

Hargis Engineers has invested a significant amount of energy and resources into the last piece of this formula. We focus on mentoring individuals who get what it means to provide professional services in support of national retailers who are racing against the clock to capitalize on finite windows of opportunity to meet business objectives. These team members identify the unique distinctions between our different clients, utilize past lessons learned and provide services that enhance the client's enterprise process.
